ossip is a common and important aspect of life. No matter where you are from, you have most likely participated in gossip in some way, from picking up gossip tabloids like this one, to just talking about experiences that other people have gone through. The nature of gossip is commonly believed to be in bad spirits and mean, but the nature of gossip is that we care about a person. Celebrity gossip happens because people want to know about their favorite celebrity's life. Gossip in school happens because people want to know about each other. It can be hurtful, when done in bad spirt but, at Buck's Rock, we tend to stay more positive.

At this camp, most of us care about each other deeply. It's a safe haven for many creative people and hopefully will be for many years to come. People find love here; in others, in the art that they make, simply by being in this environment with others who understand them. Many tabloids are centered around love; who's dating who, how the world loved a person, family details.

At camp, I usually feel a general sense of love for people in a way that never seems to happen outside of camp in the same way.

This is my second year at Buck's Rock and I have been here for four sessions, seeing campers leave and come back, seeing how much everyone cares for each other. It's why I come back. There's no reason to go to all of the LSD calls if I don't like the company of those there, no reason to spend hours sitting with my fabric at Batik without the people who make it enjoyable, and no reason to be here, writing this, without caring about all those who get to see it.

So, please enjoy the work that so many of us put so many hours into making whole.

CREATIVE & PERFORMING ARTS CAMP

DIRECTORS' MESSAGE

Shop drama? Admin feuds? Sports gossip?

Not if we can help it!

For 81 years, Buck's Rock Camp has been a place where we take care of each other. Away from the academic demands and structure of regular life, we strive to cultivate freedom and creativity by giving young artists the opportunity to just be. Campers are free to focus on the art that interests them, on the social opportunities of a supportive community, and the chance to perform on stage for the first time or the hundredth.

There's a certain irony to this years yearbook theme that is very "Buck's Rock," as Ernst and Ilse's prevailing vision continues to curate an experience for us that provides a respite from adult expectation or conformity. The world of tabloid drama is founded on gossip and bringing people down, but here at Buck's Rock, failure is encouraged! Try a shop and it doesn't work out? Try something else! Forget a line in the Clown Show? Your scene partner will use what they've learned in improv to adapt and push on. Break a cup in the Glass Shop? The next one will be even better.

In the real world, gossip tends to be targeted and judgmental; here at Buck's Rock, we love to share stories of everyone else's successes. In the evenings after put-to-bed, staff are swapping stories of a beginner flutist performing a scale in a MuShed recital, hilariously clever buttons made in Pub, and a goal scored by a camper who had never played soccer before. Watching our campers gain confidence in their art and independence is an inspiration and the driving force of our community, and like the tabloids, we love to brag about it!

In 2023, we celebrated two new shop additions – the FabLab extension of the Computer Shop, and a brand new space called the Recycled Materials Lab. Right from the start of the summer, we "gossiped" about how both spaces feel like they've actually been here all along. A new evening activity, the Buck's Rock version of a pro wrestling match, merged rock-paper-scissors with staff choreographed drag wrestling and pushed our entire community to cheers and tears of laughter.

Buck's Rock staples like the Clown, Dance, Puppet, and Theater shows and Rock Café performed to packed houses as the entire community came together in support of our artists. As the summer concludes and our camper visual arts showcase goes up in the Actors' Studio, the culmination of a summer's worth of support and collaboration will be on display for us all.

Thank you for being a part of Buck's Rock, and for sharing this journey with us. We can't wait to see what comes next!

With love.

Leather? Fab Lab Denies Shop Stealing Allegations

"Leather? What is Leather?" asks the staff of not only Computer Shop but the totally classic and not at all new Fabrications Lab. dubbed Fab Lab. Do they think we'll just forget all the fun we had last year? "They're twisted! They sit all high and mighty with their air conditioning and their two shop spaces," says our inside source. "And every night they celebrate. Those villians."

Chlorine Gas "Incident" at Computers

Robin: What do we need for the shop? I'm grabbing stuff from the store.

Meryl: I think we might be running out of disinfectant wipes.

Bill: Oh, also we're out of bleach.

Robin: Well that sounds like everything! There is totally nothing else that is essential to the shop at all. :)

speculated that there is an emulsion thief that is forcing P.A.S.S. to evade taxes in order to purchase more emulsion. Our forensic team has done research.

TYLER TRIPS COMPUTER TRAP

Amid a round of desperately needed security upgrades at Pub, Tyler the writing counselor, created a password so complicated and difficult to crack that he forgot it. Our sources say he spent hours trying to unlock the computer, but it went into lockout mode and Scott himself was called upon after a month to fix it.

BRISEIS MARTIN ANNOUNCES: SCHOOLIS A SOCIAL CONSTRUCT

Briseis Martin

chool is a social construct made by the white men to deteriorate the souls of kids (ESPECIALLY COLORED) to teach them what in society is considered right and wrong. School causes anxiety and depression in kids, as well as stress from the work they are forced to do and deliver everyday to determine their worth as an academic scholar, and in turn their self worth.

A lot of people's self worth come from bullying, whether they are the predator hurting others to feel better about themselves, or the prey where they are the one being hurt and, therefore, have a decline in self worth.

Bullying goes as far as causing people to remove themselves from the world which is rather ridiculous, because why are you hurting someone so much so they can off themselves for you to sooner be guilty about your actions?

School is just one big popularity contest that makes people feel like they will be lesser or superior as they move into their adult years.

But the truth is: STATUS IN SCHOOL DOESN'T MATTER, nor do the things that you have been called or have been said about you in school.

Moving past the social hierarchy in school, sometimes school refuses to teach you essential parts of history like slavery or the fight for equality in the queer community. Such examples consist of a school in Florida who refuses to teach kids about slavery for no exact reason, but that they claim it's in the past and that it's too sad.

WHICH IS CERTAINLY NOT TRUE.
But in general, school just sometimes doesn't teach you parts of history which could, or are essential, to creating a better world.
IT'S ALL BECAUSE OF THE SCHOOL SYSTEM WHY THEY DON'T TEACH IT.

If that's the reason, then the school system must be changed. I'm not saying all school systems are bad, but 90% of the school population is like this.

School claims to prepare you for the world, but why must I go through so much confusion to pay my bills? Why can't school teach? Being street smart and book smart are two different things. But, being street smart allows you to actually be prepared for the world. When you're street smart, you're woke, and you're aware of the causes around you. It's either that or you walk around the streets of New York clueless, expecting sunshine and rainbows.

Believing in school doesn't make it real.

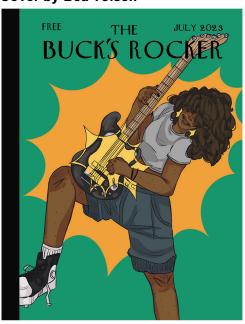

The system in which we are learning in forces us to know that and ONLY that.

BE WOKE NOT BROKE.

EXCLUSIVE: Excerpt from LOGBOOK of a MARTIAN PIRATE KID

Max Mayer

Spatial date: 2110842

(1/8/2142) First Entry

Apparently, everyone in our family has to have a logbook from the age of 15, so on my birthday, January 8th in Earth time, my present from my dad was a computer-writing software called "Logbook", which has the logs of every family member all the way up to my great-grandfather, James Mayer, the person who got our family into this mess.

When Great Grandpa James was flying the Chrome, our family's old starship, he crashed it into the surface of uninhabited Mars. James' wife and three kids were with him, and that's how the Chrome Outpost was created.

The first words of James's log were "I have made a dire mistake."
He was definitely right about that.
The Chrome Outpost was definitely not the shining "New Frontier" explorers, scientists, and astronauts on Earth dreamed of. We're pirates, we're criminals, and we're raiders.
Just yesterday, my Dad, Sister, and I took the "Chrome B", our new transportation ship, and raided the Phobos Space Dock, the closest the rest of humanity has ever gotten to Mars, and stole $9,500 worth of android docking parts. We've sort of been tricking the Phobos Dock for months by stealing their docking parts and selling it back to them through our connections on Earth, then we steal them back again.

Our ship still doesn't have the ability to make it back to Earth in a few days like every other ship of today can because of one simple thing: we've been stuck here since 2063081, or in Earth terms, 6/30/2081, and it's been decades since then.

Technology has advanced extremely far with us none the wiser. The Chrome, in its prime, was the fastest ship in the solar system and could make it to Neptune in under two months at top speed. Now, with experimental space-warping technology, Neptune is only half-a-month away, and Mars could be traveled to in a 17-hour trip at top speed.

So, why hasn't the rest of humanity colonized Mars yet?

They've tried, a lot, but the microscopic dust particles of Mars sabotaged their plans over and over again. The first attempt, so much dust got into the oxygen tanks that they had to leave the settlement abandoned. We salvaged the parts of it and sold them back to Earth. The second attempt, the dust got into the solar panels of the base and they lost power within a month. The people from the second attempt couldn't escape, as those solar panels also powered their starship, so they joined us and we used the parts of their dead base to establish ours further. The third and final attempt, the Martian dust got into the fuel tanks of their starship, and during an evacuation due to an oxygen leak, their starship exploded, taking the base and everybody on the base with it.

How do we survive on Mars when the rest of humanity has failed over and over again?

We got lucky. The Chrome, which served as the starting ground for the outpost, was made of a rare material that blocked out dust more efficiently. We also crashed close to the South Pole, so with that geographical advantage we could get water, something all three colony attempts didn't take into account. All they had was their water storage they brought from Earth before they all failed.

Well, that's my first entry. I hope all generations after me can learn from this.

Abigale Mayer, signing off.

and so what if the tape is peeling off the walls take these stickers so we'll match i heard you got compliments on it? that's nice thank you for telling me will you keep playing?

i turned off my headphones for you

the lights look nice at night tell me your favorite color you get to pick good morning thank you for forgetting about your alarm i almost slept through breakfast hotel california in the morning? not a bad choice good night we have tie-dye bedding

it kind of matches
let me know when you're ready i'll turn the lights off will you keep singing?

i turned off my headphones for you could you call us family? i don't know we're a weird kind of community eight weeks is a while, isn't it?

in our tiny cabin with lights on the walls

maybe i'll drive away and feel that hole in my chest that emptiness of a lost home and i'll know we always were we always were.
i have way too much dried mango of course you can have some yes, i'll take a shortbread cookie grandma snacks are the best, you're right. want an animal cracker?
i have too many
do you like the lights?
(i love you) will you keep playing? can i sing along? i turned off my headphones for you everywhere you look, this place is full of markings worn rocks, carved dirt, smeared mud, and torn grass i'm not gonna do this your way i'm doing it mine eighty-one years of desire paths.

there's one by the dance studio, dodging rocks and trees. one next to lodge, from simon to the stairs one in a garden box, diagonal through it in case a camper gets bored two steps in? one from the porch, crossing a hill and settling into the open pavilion (the only way to reach from one to the other)

i'm tired of walking, i've danced all day it's much faster to go this way instead where's the entrance to the deluxe? there's a shortcut back here somewhere how do you find the cit's home and how do you run away when they see you? this rock in front of radio is short enough to step over.

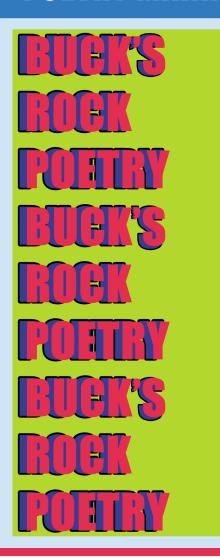

i can't quite draw and i can't quite dance but i know what a path should look like and i know what a better one does. i'm not gonna do this your way i'm doing it mine

i heard they're redoing the hill and building a path to the pavilion. they're gonna pave it with our names and our years? i guess when they're already there carved into the ground all you can do is set it in stone BENNY

OUR HOUSE

This house enthralls me
It grabs my heart between its doors,
Smashing to the rhythym of its shutters,
Slamming in the wind.
This house consumes me
And opening my door of lip and tooth,
I let it.

POETRY MAKING ITS COMEBACK AT BUCK'S ROCK

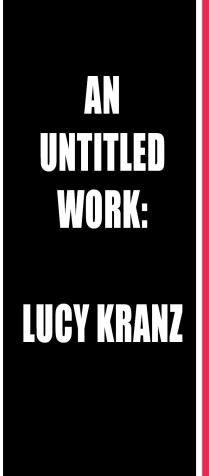

You say I seek attention
I don't think you understand
It isn't my intention
To make you feel
There's no prevention

But is it a bad thing? Is your small mind in the dark The mistakes I make Do they really leave a mark?

Sometimes my thoughts
Come out a little bit too loud
I don't know how to eat my words
But I can still be proud

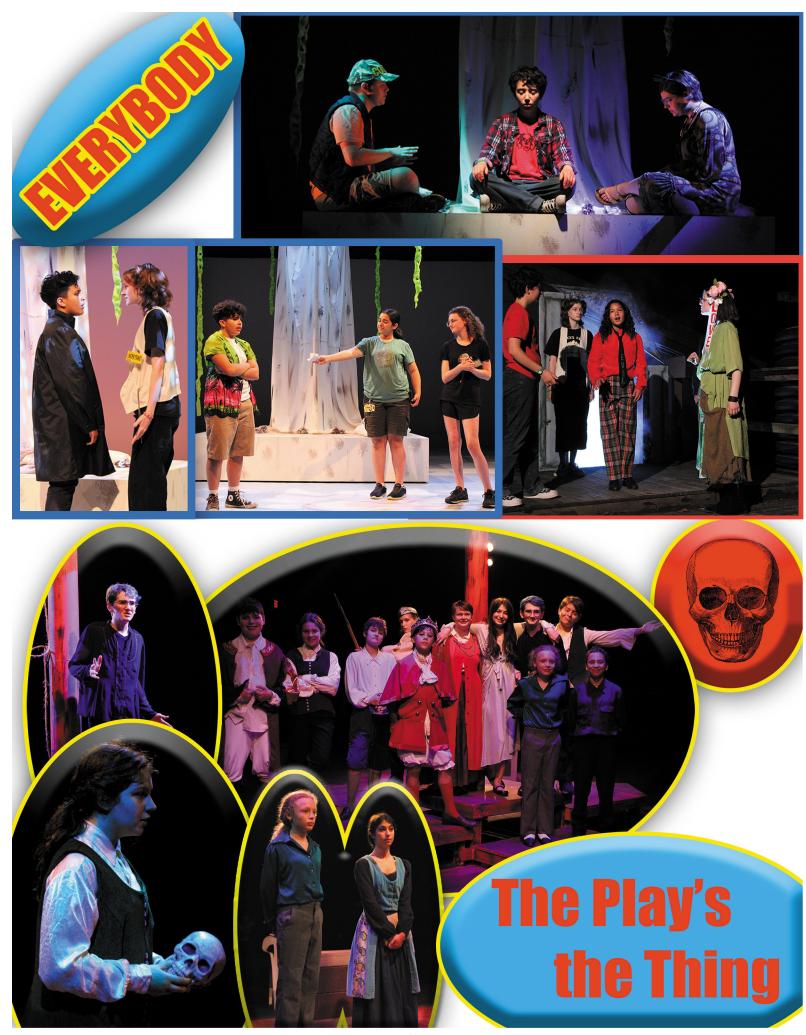

Your comments won't shrink me They'll just make me grow I don't think you can see But I'm one of my own

I'm not that contained
My filter is small
But look at all I've gained
You won't make me fall

CONTENT WARNING

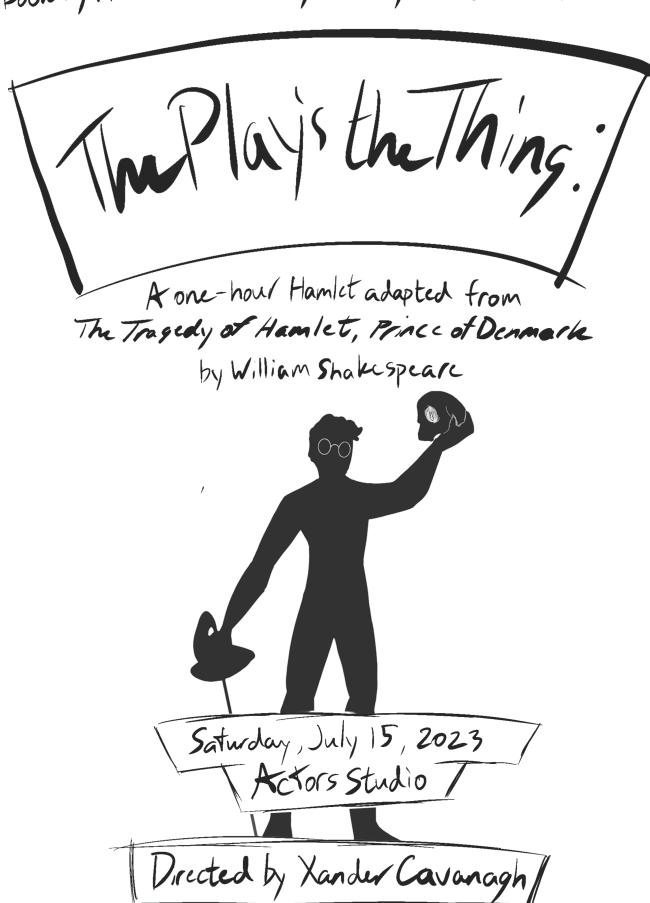

At Buck's Rock, we have a longstanding history of choosing art that deals with themes and content that may go beyond more traditional child and young adult fare. "Everybody" falls under that category. Before we start, we wanted to make sure you are aware of some of Everybody's difficult themes so that you can decide whether or not tonight's performance is right for you. These themes include death, sexual themes, depression, mental health, and religion. While "Everybody" is often comedic and will use humor to weave in and out of these themes, please be mindful if these may be a trigger for you. Thank you.

CONTENT WARNING:

Please be advised that this show contains recorded gunshot sounds alongside a prop gun which leads to a staged death. Additionally, in a different scene, the show briefly mentions self-harm and suicide. In both instances they are used in a comedic fashion, but we understand some may find themes such as gun violence difficult.

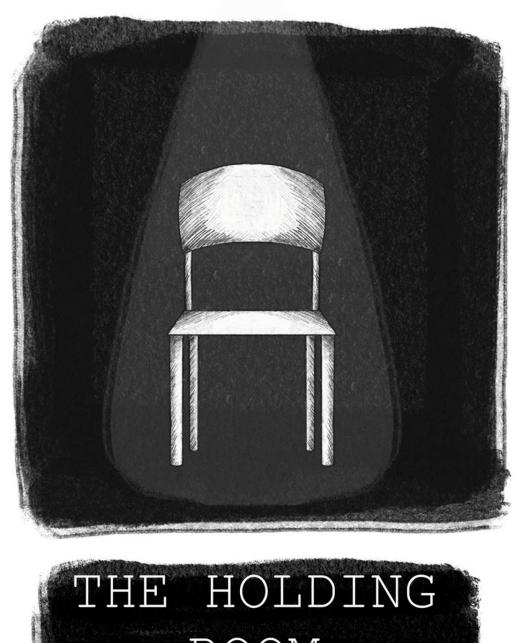

as Doctor

Chatting up lesbians, Pub, rejecting gay sherbet, hi cheese?, Office, Alfie's pizza shelf, Recycled Materials, Zora speaking at hyperspeed squared, Painting, accidentally robbing the pizza place, dramatic lights and sound, Book Arts, Puppetry, Disney Channel sound effects, Book Arts, "practicing", Jeffery Dahmer cosplay, gay husbands, love > wood, official diagnosis: lol simp, Bekah desperately needing a hug, Kander Cavanagh, Paige Lienhard, exhaling "I got this", Antonia, Scott, and Lizzie, and, of course, Ernst and Ilse.
